

Are you an Aboriginal Drug & Alcohol Health Worker?

Do you work with young Aboriginal people? Are those young Aboriginal people looking for a creative outlet during school holidays?

Why not participate in our DEADLY SHOTS AOD project?

All you have to do is:

- Contact the AH&MRC for an application form and submit it in by the 30th of July 2010
- Attend 1 of our ½ day workshops in Tamworth (16th of August) Sydney (19th of August) or Griffith on the (20th of August 2010)
- Use our resource pack to run an education session with young Aboriginal community members.
- Organise your group to take photos that represents AOD for them.
- Send cameras back to us by the 15th of October 2010.
- Encourage your group to have fun with this and be as CREATIVE as they desire.

The Aboriginal Health & Medical Research Council of NSW (AHMRC) is hosting a photo exhibition for young Aboriginal people.

Deadly Shots 'Drugs & our community through the lens of a camera' involves young Aboriginal people taking photos to promote messages about the affects alcohol and other drugs have in community.

Funding will be provided to successful applicants to attend the workshop which will include;

- An update on alcohol and other drugs
- Criteria for taking photos
- Consent and confidentiality
- Steps to creating a resource for the community by the community.
